

MARATHON TRAINING PLAN – RUN/WALK

This run/walk plan is ideal if you are just starting out on your running journey taking you through 14 weeks of training based on a mix of running and walking to get you ready to have a fantastic experience on marathon day..

Keeping it all in balance.

Performance training and developing your fitness can seem complicated at times with lots of information and conflicting advice. In truth it can be kept simple. The key is the training triangle you see to overleaf. Most of us think about the training sessions we need to do to become stronger, fitter or faster. You won't really make gains until the other two sides of the triangle - the nutrition, and the rest and recovery are also considered as much focus and attention. As you increase your training keep the triangle in balance by improving your nutrition by ensuring you listen to your body and respect its need to rest to improve.

Training. Your running, cross training and conditioning sessions contained within this plan need to progress over the weeks and get more specific to the distance for which you are training.

Rest. Recovery between sessions is as critical to success as the training itself. Your body improves and progresses during these rest phases, rest days and as you sleep.

Nutrition. You need to fuel your training and recovery correctly to ensure you have the right macro and micro nutrients in the body to both have the energy to train hard, but also heal muscles and cells between sessions and keep you immune system, blood and bones strong

MARATHON TRAINING PLAN – RUN/WALK

- Always substitute cross-training for running if you are injured, very sore or it's not safe to run.
- Please add core conditioning, Pilates or yoga classes once or twice a week if you have time.
  - Try to stretch every day for at least 10 minutes.
  - Always eat within 20–30 minutes of finishing a run.
- Always train at the specified efforts; don't compromise or run too hard. Tiredness always catches up, so take extra rest if required.
